DETAILED ACTION

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Dobbs et al (2002/0185266).

Dobbs et al disclose a heat exchanger of a ventilating system including a plurality of heat exchanging plates (20), a first heat exchange member laminated among the heat exchanging plates and formed in a mesh in the first air path (Fig. 9), and a second heat exchange member laminated among the heat exchanging plates and formed in a mesh in the second air path (Fig. 9), the heat exchanging plate being formed with aluminum or paper materials (para. 0006, lines 13 and 19), and the heat exchange members being positioned in a corrugated shape (Fig. 13).

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 4 and 5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Dobbs et al (2002/0185266) in view of Lehman et al (2002/0011331).

Dobbs et al disclose the claimed structure with the exception of the heat exchange members being positioned at an angle. Lehman et al teach positioning heat exchange members at an angle of 30 degrees to the air flow. It would have been obvious in view of Lehman et al to position the heat exchange member of Dobbs et al at an angle to the air flow, the motivation being to increase the turbulence and thus the heat transfer rate.

5. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

6. Claims 6-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 6 requires that the heat exchange members be in the form of a plate with a plurality of through holes. However, claim 1, from which claim 6 depends, requires that the heat exchange members be in the form of a mesh. In the specification, applicant discloses the heat exchange members having two separate embodiments: being in the form of a plate with a plurality of through holes, or alternatively, in the form of a mesh. The specification does not appear to disclose the two embodiments in combination. Since claim 6 is inconsistent with the claims from which it depends, it cannot be examined on the merits at this time.

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Curran, Astle, Wakeman, Dahlgren, Mulvaney are cited to show slanted heat exchange members. Yoshino et al and Martin et al are cited to show heat and moisture transfer devices.
